

Communication Styles that Contribute to Team Dynamics

Understanding your own communication style is essential to contributing to a high performing team. Understanding the communication style of your colleagues helps to build trust, collegiality and ultimately strengthens your relationships as a team. Lastly, understanding your own communication style and that of others allow team members to embrace their differences and leverage strengths. There are a few steps to this activity:

Step One: As individuals, take the communication styles self-assessment and score it using the scoring sheet provided.

Step Two: Come together with your team and share the results of your communication style quiz.

- Allow each person to describe his or her communication style. If you are working in a larger team, ask members who have the same results to group together to discuss their communication style. Invite one member of the group report out to the larger team.
- Remember, everyone has their own unique communication style to report out and one style is not better or worse than another.

Step Three: Once everyone has reported out on their style, consider and discuss these questions:

- What do you have in common and what is different about your styles?
- What improvements could you make to your team's communication to take into consideration the variation of styles on your team?
- How do you think you could leverage communication style differences to strengthen your team?
- What strategies will you use on your team to leverage the strengths of team members?
- What strategies will you use to recognize the diversity of team members?

Step Four: Revisit your teamwork agreement.

- Based on your discussion about communication styles, does your teamwork agreement need to be updated?
- How do ground rules need to be set around how you communicate?
- Consider the modality, formality, and frequency of your team communication when updating the agreement.
